Nongfu Spring chairman draws ire of China's nationalists Nongfu Spring founder Zhong Shanshan has been accused of being disloyal to China over the design of a green tea drink bottle by his company. BEIJING - China's richest man Zhong Shanshan is the latest public figure to find himself in hot. The controversial Nongfu Spring acquisition in Nashua, New Hampshire, underscores how local land and water transactions in the US are no longer seen as purely commercial. Instead, they are increasingly evaluated through the lens of national security, resource sovereignty and strategic competition. China's richest man, Zhong Shanshan, has come under scrutiny. Is it me or are more boards being stolen at numerous resorts this season?

I swear I've never seen so many posts about board theft until this year, and we're not even halfway through the season! I hope y'all who were stolen from get some revenge (or at least a sick replacement for a good price). China's drinks giant Nongfu Spring, the country's largest bottled water producer, has become the latest target in a series of attack campaigns from an increasingly vocal constituency of nationalists online, prompting concerns over what effect this group may have on an already fragile private.
